Wealth Management Series
Family Trusts: Beyond Technical Proficiency

A two-day program to help develop your trust management strategy

Trusts offer tax advantages, privacy, and asset protection. These advantages make them the central vehicle for succession planning and family wealth transfer. However, despite these technical advantages, trusts can create conflict when the complexities that they pose to the relationships of parents, children, siblings, and advisors go unaddressed. This two-day program will focus on building successful relationships among grantors, trustees, and beneficiaries and defining the responsibilities that each has to play towards the long-term health of the family.

The bottom line value to you and your family

This program will offer a unique focus on the human side of successful trust integration. Through lectures, seminar-style discussions, exercises and case studies, each participant will have the opportunity to learn to:

- Recognize the roles and responsibilities of the grantor, trustee and beneficiary.
- Learn methods for increasing effective communication and promoting healthy trust relationships.
- Create trusts that express the clear intent of the grantors.
- Understand the pros and cons of different types of trustees.
- Use communication to manage risk, protect the trustee from litigation, and preserve the grantors’ intentions.
- Assemble an effective trust team.

Keith Whitaker is an educator and philanthropist. He consults to enterprising families on succession planning, developing rising generation talent, and communicating during estate planning.

Hartley Goldstone has served high net worth families for 30 years. Today, he consults to grantors, trustees and inheritors in all stages of life, their family offices and advisors. The focus is on raising awareness of positive possibilities in the relationship between trustee and beneficiary, and then assisting to discern practical steps.

Anna Nichols creates and leads the marketing and client education strategies for Altair Advisers, with more than a decade of experience in the family wealth industry. Anna has authored multiple studies, articles and whitepapers and is a well-known writer and speaker on a wide range of generational wealth issues.

John Warnick is the founder of the Purposeful Planning Institute and Family Wealth Transitions & Solutions. As an industry leader, he delivers workshops across the nation for estate planning attorneys and financial planners sharing the Six Paradigms of Purposeful Planning and the Seven Keys of the Purposeful Trust. He also facilitates family retreats, and provides wealth counseling, fiduciary and philanthropic consulting services. He educates emerging adults in financial literacy, philanthropic service, and holistic family wealth principles. Warnick has authored two BNA (Bureau of National Affairs) Tax Management portfolios.
